

It has seemed lately that the voice of the people doesn't matter anymore, but I want to believe that it still does. By speaking out against the FCC rule change you will be speaking for the people. It is already painfully clear how there is a lack of variety on the airwaves, this change would make all airwaves unlistenable. How would you know anything was fair and balanced when it was coming from a gigantic media company who had it's own interest in what news was shared - and how people interpreted it?
